

Stephen Sum

2/3/20

Art 75

Busting the Tube Reflection

In the reading of "Busting the Tube," I read how inspiring the 1960's were when the start of Digital Media Art was on its rise. I read about Nam June Paik quite a lot and it made me a little more inspired to be a Digital Media Artist as well. Her projects with the sound qualities and differentiated sounds combined with an ambiance of the television screens seemed interesting. The rise of DMA has shown that art does not only have to be about creativity and painting.