Research 3 Video Artists

Include 3 video artist names and a brief paragraph about what you like in their work. Look for contemporary video artists from 2000 onward.

The three contemporary video artists that I have found are Christian Marclay a visual artist, Cory Arcangel a post-conceptual artist, and Mariko Mori a Japanese multidisciplinary artist. These contemporary artists caught my eye, because their art was very beautiful and connected to me in a way of how I see the world. Christian Marclay started his exploration into video art in 1979, where he started using turntables to create sound and art performances. He creates videos that depict the sound, art, and onomatopoeia series of photographs to illustrate an artist's findings everyday situations with instruments, like a turntable, guitar, or other sounds. His artwork gives insight to the audience of what he sees in the community, in society, how it is dealt with and how it feels. Cory Arcangel is a post-conceptual artist who uses media as his source of creativity. His artwork demonstrates the trends of this generation by using clothing, events, places, people, and they all connect to this modern day. Arcangel connects to the younger audience more with his artwork and that is how I connect to it. I see his photographs and attract me right away because that is what people are into today. Mariko Mori is a Japanese multidisciplinary artist who creates structures and artwork that is very similar to futuristic appearances. Her artwork questions the world, life, death, and reality, they communicate to the audience of the possible things you can have in the future. These three artists show amazing artwork and connect to everyday life and possibilities you can gain from them.
