Starting off, I finally understand the difference between Augmented Reality versus Virtual Reality. Augmented Reality has a very concept, similar to mobile games that have been developing out with the option of AR. After reading the articles, it feels like that this concept is more of an ideal for devices that have cameras or devices that can have the environment involved. Whether inside a museum or outside on a sidewalk, people can create their art with AR.

With AR art, it seems to bring another level of way of experimenting with this concept. Instead of AR games, we are investing our time and efforts into artworks that can be used in the physical environment without actually harming the spaces in the Art. As mentioned in the article, this is a new way of looking at Art. I guess you can say that this is a huge step in advancement of Art but yet also technology.
